OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

John Muir once said to Mr. Harriman, "I am richer than you are." "Yes," said Mr. Harriman, "but how?" Mr. Muir answered, "Because I've got enough money and you haven't." John Muir placed money in the right place, using it as a means solely to help him to become a great servant of his time. It is not the amount of money we have that counts; it is our attitude towards it that determines whether or not we are dollar-idolaters.—The Christian Herald.

Mr. Muir had discovered a secret which many of us have sought in vain. The chase for the nimble dollar is so elusive that the chase is often disappointing.

Mr. Harriman wore himself out and died prematurely because of exhaustion in the chase. He had money enough to satisfy every want, and yet was ambitious to make more, not because he needed it, but because of the power which it gave him, in the financial world and because of the enjoyment which he got out of the game.

He was known as the great railroad king of the country, and through his money and influence some of the trunk lines connecting the east and the west were constructed. He belonged to the class of men who helped to make the nation financially strong. He lived before the days of the world's war, but his fortune is contributing today to the stability for which the country is noted.

It is a significant fact that the world's great money center has been transferred from London to New York. The Bank of England, which has long been the Gibraltar of financial strength, is being taxed beyond its capacity, and for the first time in its history the one pound sterling note, which has always been as good as gold, the world over, is being sold in the American market, at four dollars and fifty cents.

These conditions exist because of our heavy trade balance, and because of the tremendous drain on Great Britain's resources. What the final results may be no man can foretell. Many of the nations of the old world are bankrupt today and repudiation will follow as a natural result.

Germany of course makes a good showing on paper, but Germany is trading on an emergency beyond which has no more value beyond the law of nations than the southern confederate scrip in the country during the Civil war.

The old world is spending fifty million dollars a day, and this pace has been kept up for more than a year. In the day of final settlement, which is as sure to come as time is to pass, it will be found that but few, if any, of the nations involved, will be equal to the strain.

A prominent American banker said, some time ago, that this war would not end so long as the money held out, and it begins to look as though the statement might be true. When English money shows depreciation, it means a weakening all along the line for England is the financial backer of half a dozen nations.

But all this may seem wide of the mark, so far as the attitude of Mr. Muir and Mr. Harriman on money is concerned, except for the suggestion that America stands at the front today as a financial power, because the Harrimans and Morgans and Rockefellers, and men of this class, laid the foundation, and built wisely.

The most of us are satisfied with a moderate income and are very careful to see that it is spent about as fast as it comes in. We may possess a desire to acquire a fortune, and we may envy the man who goes to the front as a magnate, but the desire and the envy never gets us anywhere, and the small estate we have is seldom subject to an inheritance tax. The good Lord never intended many of us to be rich, and so we trail along in the wake and are not always satisfied.

There are two classes of contented people. One represented by the tramp and irresponsible citizen who trusts to luck and providence for the next meal, too lazy to work, and obsessed with the notion that the world owes them a living.

The other includes the great rank and file of humanity, who look at life from Mr. Muir's viewpoint, and while ambitious to make money, are content to live by the way and get out of life what there is in it, as they journey along.

The average farmer is content to live on his generation on the old farm where he spent his boyhood. His horizon may be shut in by the little canopy which covers the hills where he has watched the sunrises and sunsets for a life time, and his associations may be largely confined to the old-time neighbors, but there is an air of contentment which lends stability to the scene.

The average toiler, in whatever channel, wakes up and down the same streets year after year contented with his lot and making the most out of life that opportunity affords, while the wife and mother, sheltered by four small walls, presides over the home and is happy.

This is life for the masses, in this free land and no country under the sun harbors so many contented people. The power of money is a marvelous power, and the ability to accumulate it in millions is as much of a gift as the gift of oratory, or the gift of a voice which enchants the great audience in song, but the world needs the common people to fill the niches which line the great highway, just as much as it needs the stars of first magnitude, which dazzle us with their brilliancy.

There should be no conflict between the men who go to the front, and the men who toil by the way. The same rugged path has been traveled by all.

the great captains of industry, and while they have forged ahead, they have left the roadway in good condition.

We need great leaders as much as we need an army of contented toilers and when we work with them, the rough places of life are often made smooth.

The late Henry Flagler made an immense fortune in developing the state of Florida. When nearly eighty years old and totally blind, he satisfied his last ambition by completing the Gulf road to Key West, one of the greatest feats of engineering ever accomplished.

This work remains as a monument to his memory, but it is more than that because it will bless humanity for generations to come, as one of the great highways which puts us in closer touch with the South American countries.

We may not all be rich, but it is possible for the most of us to enjoy a healthy contentment. If we can't secure it in any other way, perhaps it will come to us as it came to this man.

"He never mourned his lot or grieved for favors he had not received; He never envied others who were proud and rich and famous, too; He never sneered and never sighed, But was supremely satisfied."

He felt no bitterness because He was not richer than he was; No longing ever filled his breast; For blessings other men possessed; Cold or hot or dry was weather; The weather never made him fret.

He always had a cheerful smile, He was contented all the while; Within a big asylum yard He strolled, attended by a guard, And, thinking that he was a king, Approved of every earthly thing.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Daily Novelette

Professor Lummock, glancing idly from his laboratory window, bit one of his lips, and his eyes flashed in honest indignation.

"Those boys are torturing that poor flea!" he thought, and raced down stairs and down into the street and over to where a group of boys were trying to teach a flea to draw an express wagon. Nearly lay a spindle dog, the original owner of the flea.

"Boys!" cried the professor. "Aren't you ashamed! Don't you know that that little flea has feelings and sensations just the same as you? Don't you know you are causing it pain and discomfort? That is cruelty! Give that dog back his flea instantly!" And the impatient inventor kicked the boys hither and yon, and after restoring the flea to the grateful dog, went back to his laboratory, where he resumed work on his latest invention, a gas bomb that, when exploded, would kill outright 500 men with a rain of steel darts and slowly asphyxiate 700 more with pitman gas.

Kernels of The Law

Inheritance of Property.
When a person dies without leaving a will his lands descend in equal shares to his children and to the lawful issue of any deceased child, or if all his children are deceased all their children share equally. In case a widow survives she has one-third interest in all the real estate for life and the homestead during her widowhood.

If a person leaves no lawful issue his lands descend to his widow. If he shall leave no such lawful issue or widow, to his parents, if living, and if either shall not be living, the survivor shall inherit the estate.

If a person leaves no lawful issue, nor father, nor mother, his property shall descend in equal shares to his brothers and sisters and to the children of any deceased brother or sister by right of representation.

If a person leaves no lawful issue, nor widow, nor father, nor mother, nor brother, nor sister, his property shall descend to his next of kin in equal shares.

In case of personal property the widow shares equally and alike with the children and has the property absolutely. Otherwise the descent is the same as that of real estate.

SNAP SHOTS

Some men are afraid other men will steal their wives, and others are afraid they won't.

When it comes to a fight, the weakest bystander often can hold the strongest combatant.

Occasionally a woman who has killed her husband is placed on trial. But more often a collection is taken up for her benefit.

Fortunately, the man with a hand like a canvas ham usually is too fat to swing it.

Speaking of capacity to assimilate punishment, John McFee has driven a hack for thirty-seven years.

If Esau collected the mess of pottage for which, it will be recalled, he traded his birthright, he did much better than most of the spendthrifts.

Occasionally there is a man who shows manifest indications of originality. Jim Hawley never says, "The same to you."

"There is," one eminent writer has observed, "more than one way to kill a cat." Buck Kibby, therefore, suggests that all of the various methods be employed.

After a time a man becomes so bald that he has to have his hair cut every other day.

A man may be said to be making progress as soon as he discovers that the soap box at the corner grocery is a mighty poor seat.

When a lecture is free you are expected to buy a book or a shaving-strop from the man who delivered it.

When a millionaire dies it generally develops that he was worth $100,000, and that he had been paying taxes on a valuation of $20,000.

A good camel will travel 100 miles in a day. "An ordinary camel" travels only 75 miles in a day. In buying camels make it a point to select only those having both speed and endurance.

Eph Wiley says he has noticed that the man with a long chain is the one most likely to accentuate it by wearing whiskers.

Jasper Ellington spreads such a fine line of salt that a good many are advising him to put it up in boxes and place it on the market.

If a man doesn't have to get down to work early he would just as soon do it.

THE DAWN OF A NEW HOPE

FOR YOU who have long suffered from so-called incurable diseases and ailments; trying every means and paying out money indiscriminately without results, here is a cheering message to direct you to the road that leads to relief and ultimate recovery:

Chiropractic Adjustment

Chiropractic is based upon the knowledge of the brain, spinal column, spinal cord and the nerves emanating therefrom. Pressure on a nerve at the opening where it leaves the spinal column, will cause disease in that organ or tissue at which the nerve ends. The Chiropractor adjusts with his own hands and WITHOUT DRUGS OR KNIFE, the displaced vertebrae, which relieves the pressure and enables Nature to restore normal conditions—Health.

The beneficial results which Nature produced after the Chiropractor adjusted the cause in some long standing obstinate ailments, demonstrate the merits of Chiropractic.

Learn more about this new science that aids Nature to bring you back to Happiness and Health. Call and investigate.

WRITES OF MEETING DOCTOR'S ROOMMATE

"LAST RAY OF HOPE GONE" SAYS MRS. E. F. WOODS IN LETTER FROM NEW YORK.

WENT DOWN IN BERTH

Dr. Gaultier Tells of Dr. Woods' Composing Himself for Another Nap as He Left Cabin on Day of Disaster.

Dr. Edmund F. Woods was probably asleep in his berth when the Arabic was sunk by a torpedo from a German submarine. This information was learned by Mrs. Woods at New York where she is now. Dr. Woods' cabin mate, and has been received in letters today from Mrs. Woods by John T. Fitchett and Miss Charlotte Russell, who are in the number of passengers of the Arabic, all of whom assured her that all hope of the doctor's being saved, was gone. Mrs. Woods will remain in the east for another week before returning to Janesville. She will go to Washington for a conference with Secretary of State Lansing, she states in one of her letters.

Mrs. Woods writes as follows: "The last ray of hope is gone. Have seen the doctor's roommate who saw him at 8:15 a. m., and who said to the doctor, 'Hurry, hurry, get up, you'll be late to breakfast.' The doctor answered him, 'I'm not a lazy man or land, but I am a lazy man at sea.' That's all I got out of him. I'm not going to get up until late. And Mr. Gaultier said as he went out the doctor composed himself as for another nap. The rest of the particulars must wait until I get home, except that not only he, but other survivors who came and talked to me, said that the explosion was smothered and except for the tremendous jar that went through all the ship, you would not know from sound or feeling that anything had happened, and she was beneath the waves in less than five minutes. One of the said, 'No hope, and when I tell you of the unusual number of friends he made in the short time he had. Quite unusual.'"

John W. Bleasdale of the town of Janesville, has received a letter from his uncle, Joseph Bleasdale of Liverpool, England, in which he tells of meeting Dr. Woods and of a day which they spent together at Mr. Bleasdale's home. Mr. Bleasdale also went to Liverpool on the day that Dr. Woods sailed on the Arabic and was told by the doctor to bid him farewell. His letter follows in part:

Aug. 23, 1915.

"My Dear Nephew: Your letter of Aug. 10 was received this morning so I will answer a few lines. Of course I will be glad to hear from you next time I take place. I feel pretty well shaken up. The past week has been crucial. A week ago today, Aug. 16, just after dinner, Dr. Woods unexpectedly dropped in with a letter which was coming to Liverpool. Of course it was a pleasant surprise and we talked a lot. He said he had had a lunch in Liverpool and that he should not be at home, so we were disappointed that he could not sleep. However, next day, he came up early and stayed all day and we had a good time. He went back in the evening to town, and I agreed to meet him next day, Wednesday, the 18th, at Pier Head, before going on board, which I did, and he told me about his voyage, and to remember us to all. The Arabic left about two p. m. Well, next day in the afternoon the report came that the ship had been torpedoed with a loss of passengers. Of course I was shocked and all sorts of rumors were bandied about. I had the fond hope that Dr. Woods had the fond hope that I should hear something in due time. All day Thursday and Friday I still hoped to hear something, but also, it ended in despair."

"After we had gone to bed Friday night, about 11 p. m., we were aroused. Bang! Bang! A cablegram sent from the office from London. Dr. Woods said 'Arabic' signed 'Mrs. E. F. Woods.' Saturday morning early I went to the White Star office but couldn't learn anything. They still have no word. I called on Mrs. Woods. 'Yes, missing,' which, without doubt, she received in due time, and you will have heard. They sent for me to the consulate and gave me all the information I could as they are looking after these matters closely. No doubt, Mrs. Woods will be protected. Such an end and every body else will be for these practical works, carried on in a practical, practical manner of all warnings."

Special cars Sunday and Monday to Beloit for the Cardinals-Fairbanks Morse game. Come along.

RED SOX PLAY WHITE SOX IN TITLE GAME

Tomorrow morning at nine o'clock the Janesville Red Sox will play the White Sox for the championship of the city, at the fair grounds. This will be a very exciting game as the Red Sox are yet to be defeated. They have won fifteen games this season, the mighty Kakuske doing the best in all the games. The line-up for the Red Sox will be: Spohn; c. Kakuske; p. Jackson; ss. Miller; lb. Dopp; 2b. McInelly; 3b. Robey; lf. Hovick; cf. C. F. Kennedy; cf. C. F. Brant; lf. Skelly, rf.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

The widely heralded Chicago musical play, "The Lady in Red," is leaving the Geo. M. Cohan Grand opera house in Chicago, after an all summer's stay, holding the musical record, and is to be seen at Myers' theatre for a one day engagement on Saturday, Sept. 11, matinee and night. Each and everyone of the all star cast, as well as the beauty chorus and the complete equipment is promised for the local appearance, and it might be said right here that this is one of the very few organizations that goes on tour absolutely intact, many companies are heralded as original, but when they strike here they are usually a few names shy. But in this particular case, we get exactly what Chicago had, and Manager Myers of the Myers theatre verifies the assertion as he has in his possession an original program and has been assured by the owners of the company that this also stands for the local engagement.

Playgoers are well aware of the fact that Valli Valli, Glenn Hall, Edward Martindel, Gertrude Vanderbilt, Will Phillips, Josie Intropidi, George Moore, Henry Vincent, Ann Herndon, Ward de Wolf, Phyllis Maude and Laville Gardiner have all been advertised as the originals.

The book and lyrics are by Anne Caldwell, who scored a decided success in the writing of "Chin Chin," one of Broadway's biggest hits. The music is by Robert Winterberg, and staged by Robert Milton and Frank Smithson.

The company numbers an even half hundred, and has been christened the best singing organization in the Windy City this summer.

Manager Myers announces that mail orders will now be received when accompanied by draft or money order and will be filled prior to the regular season.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

"Henpecked Henry" by all physicians is recommended for what ails you. The man who can laugh and enjoy himself is ever welcome in any throng. Laughter is a better tonic than any concoction the apothecary can mix, because it drives dull care away and the patient does not know he is taking medicine.

Many a business man with cares on his mind is transported into another land in a few moments when he gets a chance to laugh heartily. It is a stimulant both to the brain and the brawn. Some men make a business of establishing laugh factories, and then, with the aid of the public, maintaining them for the good of all.

If you are in need of the best tonic in the world get ready to see Halton Powell's "Henpecked Henry," when that man of a million troubles comes to Myers' theatre Monday, Sept. 6, matinee and night, Labor day.

"Henpecked Henry" is the best laugh factory ever put on the American stage, and principally so because his many predicaments are homelike productions. This famous musical comedy has enjoyed most successful runs through the English speaking nations, and almost entirely so because it is a geysir of mirth. As the show comes here, it is presented by an especially strong company, and the efforts of the Myers theatre to make this season one memorable for the quality of the shows presented.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

Occasionally some play strikes a note that rings out clear and true in the mind of the common people and impresses its auditor with the thought that it was written not for gain, not for pastime, but because some man had something to say to other men and he took this means of expression.

"The Shepherd of the Hills," Harold Bell Wright's dramatization of his novel of the same name, is this kind of a play. Mr. Wright had felt within his soul the peace and beauty of the hills and he wished to set down their meaning before him. He made a play that in plot is compelling, one that never fails in sincerity. The people who move in it are so human that the auditor will pick them out for like and dislike as if he really knew them.

There is the shepherd, the man who came to the hills to learn, and to learn he taught. Old Nattie, who dreamed the memory of a wrong that could never be righted: Young Matt, a Hercules of the hills country, whose strength of heart and soul equaled the strength of his body. Sammy Lane, bright and buoyant with the youth of the hill country, and the other quaint characters that enliven the play with humor.

The scene of the play is in the high hills of the Ozark mountains. The mists of the valleys, the glories of the sunsets, the magnificent vistas from the summits have been brought out by the wonderful ingenuity of the scenic artist and electrician's craft. It is the spirit of the land that Mr. Wright has caught that makes the play one that is unique and one that will stand in a field of its own.

Intense dramatic scene from "The Shepherd of the Hills" at Myers Theatre Tuesday, matinee and evening.

"The Shepherd of the Hills" will be the attraction at the Myers theatre Tuesday, Sept. 7. The enormous popularity of the Harold Bell Wright novel indicates that the second annual engagement of this, his first play, will prove a greater popular success with patrons of this house than it did on its initial appearance last season.

AT THE APOLLO.

Janet Beecher in "Fine Feathers." On Tuesday the Apollo will present the beautiful and talented actress Janet Beecher, in the great stage success, "Fine Feathers."

Janet Beecher, as Jane Reynolds, endures much agony for her foolish aspirations after fine feathers and the unmoral means she chooses in order to gratify her inordinate vanity.

"Fine Feathers" was a very great success in play form; it was greeted all over the country, as a strong offering; the story being feasible and convincing; the characterization distinctive and clever. Moreover it was well acted.

A practised dramatist made the play so that in the film the strength of the original story is evidenced. Two young people are dissatisfied with their life in a New York suburb. The man (Bob Reynolds) passes off some bad cement as good, and thus gets enough money to gratify his young wife's love of fine feathers. His husband and wife come to grief, however, and in the end resolve to begin life afresh, contented with their humble surroundings.

Splendid photography and good acting characterize this picture, which has some remarkable sets showing night life at Murray's Restaurant, New York, the bursting of a dam and the flooding of the surrounding country.

AT THE APOLLO.

Victor Moore in "Chimmie Fadden." In an interview in Chicago this week in speaking of the tremendous hit Victor Moore has been making in "Chimmie Fadden," Cecil De Mille, the wonderful brain back of the producing end of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Film Company, said: "I believed and I still believe that no one can laugh for five reels. So we made an experiment. We figured that people could be made to laugh for two and one-half reels, so we decided to make them laugh just as hard as they could for two and one-half reels, and then stir in, in flashes for the next two reels, the reels of the most strenuous melodrama."

"Chimmie was an experiment, but it seemed to go so well that we are going to do more of it. We are going to have a series, not a serial, but a release every so often, building up the character, having Chimmie doing different things and using practically the same cast. The next one, will be the latest production of the Famous Players Film Company, "Fadden On Wheels," and then we'll have him abroad and other places. We do the scenarios out there ourselves."

Victor Moore will be seen at the Apollo on Monday in "Chimmie Fadden."

AT THE APOLLO.

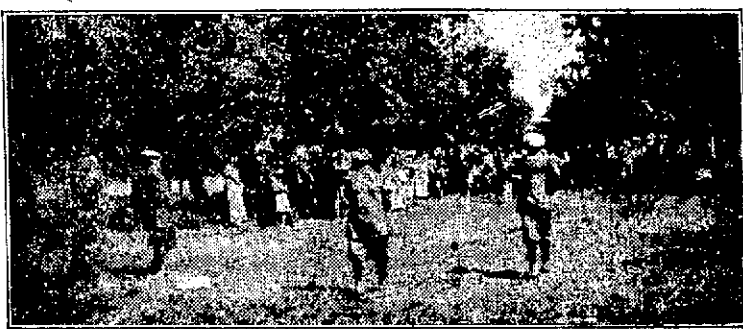

Mary Pickford, Supreme Screen Favorite, in New Playhouse. Mary Pickford, the unrivalled favorite of the screen appears in an original and incomparable portrayal at the Apollo on Wednesday, on the Paramount Program as "Little Pal," the latest production of the Famous Players Film Company.

"Little Pal" provides Mary Pickford with one of the most unique roles in which she has ever been pictured. The play is one of primitive emotions, a primitive passion, and evidences a hitherto unsuspected versatility.

Unfamiliar with the customs of modernity and remote from all the influences which have fashioned our present civilization, "Little Pal" recognizes no other force than the dominant love which develops within her for the one man who has practiced justice toward her. Through a series of thrilling sacrifices, she proves her loyalty and devotion toward him and when she has at last secured his happiness requests no other reward from him or fate.

Mary Pickford invests this extraordinary characterization with all the power and charm for which she is justly celebrated. In her moments of tender solicitude for the man who has befriended her she is more of the inimitable Little Mary than we have seen in some time. In the situations in which her sacrifice reaches its greatest heights, she is a veritable Bernhardt, and the expression of suffering and courage on her face alternating with fear and anxiety which now and then are submerged by an emotion that she later discovers to be love, can be accepted as some of the best screen work she has ever performed.

Community Day At Fulton

The above picture shows the crowd assembled at the big Fulton Community field day, held on the Frank Sayre Grove north of Fulton, Thursday, August 26th. The youngsters are engaged in games, and in the distance are the youths about to start the three-legged race. Three hundred people, it is estimated attended the event.

Assisted by a capable cast, including Russell Bassett, George Anderson and William Lloyd, "Little Pal" may be termed one of the foremost Famous Players Mary Pickford triumphs that have yet appeared on the Paramount Program.

S. D. Baptists' Conference at Milton Last Week

The above picture shows a small portion of the eight hundred delegates that attended the big S. D. B. conference at Milton last week.

Above is a portion of the large cafeteria building, erected temporarily to feed the many delegates. A thousand people a day were accommodated in this building. The kitchen was staffed by a force of women in cleaning dishes by steam, while the large hall at the left is where the boilers are installed, that furnished the steam, whereby the viands were prepared.

PLANS FOR DEVELOPING OF GERMAN AFRICAN STATE MADE BY THE BRITISH

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Capetown, Sept. 4.—Plans for the development of German Southwest Africa as a part of the Union of South Africa are going forward rapidly. The government announced a few days ago that it soon would begin a scheme for sending large numbers of colonists from various parts of South Africa into the conquered territory, which contains 322,000 square miles and is more than twice the size of England. In area it equals the size of the Cape and Natal provinces combined.

Walvis Bay, one of the finest harbors in the world, in the opinion of the shipping men here, is destined to become a greater port than Durban. It will be developed with a view to making it the port of health resort for Johannesburg. It already is possible to enter a train at Johannesburg and embark at Walvis Bay for Europe. This is due to the linking up of the railway from the Cape Northwest with the German lines.

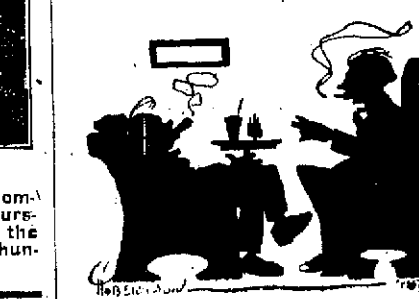

Dr. William MacDonald, editor of the Agricultural Journal, published in Johannesburg, recently has made a trip through Southwest Africa for the purpose of studying its agricultural possibilities. He says:

"The country is made up of three agricultural zones, southern, central and northern. In the first the rainfall averages about 30 inches. There is a great variety of soil, but much of it is of a brackish, alkaline nature. There are nevertheless numerous fodder and salt bushes which stock feed upon. In the Kaibart region the sweet tamma melon is found.

"In the second zone the rainfall averages 16 inches, and the country is similar to the bush and veld lands of the Transvaal, being well supplied with rich sweet grass and valuable native bushes. The most elevated parts are excellent alike for cattle, sheep and horses.

"The third zone has about twenty to twenty-seven inches of rainfall. The eastern portion consists of flat, loamy plains well suited for agricultural operations, while in the east there are good rains and much grass, the region being suited for semi-tropical culture."

A Woman's Discovery. The wife of a Congressman Taylor of Colorado says that the women of that state have found that "it does not take as long to vote as it does to match a piece of silk."

FROM THE CLUB. "They say that prize fighters don't drink!" "Bah, I don't believe it! Look at all the punches they take!"

THE GAZETTE'S MOTORIST PROBLEM DEPARTMENT

(Published Saturdays.)

Motorist Department Gazette—I have a four-cylinder 50-horsepower Buick motor car in my auto. Don't use the auto but when I start it up I prime it and it starts easily, but after I run it a while I cannot start it on the battery. The batteries get up well, and the motor will start readily on magneto. The motor is so heavy, however, it is hard to start. Can you tell me what I can do to make the car start on the batteries?

The trouble seems to be in the battery system. If the battery is not charged you will probably be able to trace something wrong in the coil or timer. If you are using dry batteries, would suggest that you try using a new set, or, better still, use a storage battery. When dry batteries are used they are very inefficiently to start the motor, but immediately drop back after a little use to a point of inefficiency. The timer should be cleaned, and if you are using wet battery cells see that the plates are cleaned and adjusted.

Motorist Department Gazette—I have a 1912 model Ford. The engine has been overhauled, all bearings tightened, and overhauled pistons put in, but still there is a peculiar knock when running twenty miles an hour or better. The noise is coming up hill or when the motor is laboring. The carbon has been removed and valves ground.

It is hardly possible to locate the knock when driving without having the car at hand. If the whole power plant has been properly overhauled, there is hardly any cause for a noise. By sounding the motor with a stethoscope you will be able to locate approximately the source of trouble. This is done by sounding the various parts of the motor when running. You may find that the knock comes from the transmission. If so this would sound through the whole power plant and impress one as being a bearing knock. The fact that the motor has been thoroughly overhauled should eliminate the knock in the motor. As stated before, it is more satisfactory to sound out the working parts in order to definitely locate the source.

Motorist Department Gazette—Please answer the following questions: Which way do you turn the two screws on the Halley's carburetor for adjustment? When I pull on a hill on a low gear or when I go pretty fast on high gear the water in the radiator boils over and I have to fill it right along. It never used to do that before, and I would like to know what causes it to boil over?

G. H. Overheating may be caused by too much carbon in the cylinders, defective hose connections, pump not working, leaky spark, or over-rich mixture. The radiator may be used considerably, perhaps the radiator needs cleaning. When a coating forms inside the radiator the cooling efficiency is reduced considerably. As for the carburetor adjustment, you did not state the motor or type of carburetor used. However, it should be an easy matter for you to determine which direction of turning shuts off the supply of fuel. You should use as much air as possible and as little gasoline as possible. In other words, cut the supply of gasoline down to a point where it will not run. Usually one adjustment is for low engine speed and the other for high engine speed.

Motorist Department Gazette—Could you tell me what makes the front wheels tremble when the car slows down? The car is a Buick model 1912. J. L. C. Loose connections in the steering rods and drag links will cause the wheels to tremble. A little nut on each connection amounts to considerable when it is loose. The installation of some new bolts and bushings together with some adjustments will remedy this.

Motorist Department Gazette—I have a Ford car that is going wrong as follows: The spark from the left-hand coil goes to the right side of the coil box and jumps to a small plate about an inch from the box, causing one of the cylinders to miss fire about once-half of the time. The box has been well. Would that cause it, and what is the remedy?

J. L. C. It would be advisable to have the coil box thoroughly dried out. Moisture in the coil box is bound to cause trouble. If the potent electricity look over the coils for you. You will probably find, however, that a wet coil box is the source of the trouble.

Motorist Department Gazette—In your recent issue J. C. asks about the noise in his differential. I am having the same trouble. However, I have tried the remedies that you suggest, having the back master gears put in. Also all bearings examined. Would appreciate any other suggestion you might make. The noise has either been sprung in the frame or housing. Had the housing examined but failed to find anything wrong.

J. C. If the axle housing is in perfect alignment and all bearings, including thrust bearings, are in good condition, the noise must be in the gears themselves. Two otherwise they will growl. The noise is either necessary to adjust for distance both ways so that the two gears will mesh.

HELPFUL HINTS.

The blades of some fans have an objectionable habit of working loose on account of defective riveting at the hubs, and for this reason a new fan should be rather carefully watched for a time. A loose blade can do a good deal of damage, and when one blade goes, the rest of the fan often is damaged, if running at very high speed, because of the lack of balance.

A scraping noise sometimes can be traced to a valve spring which has become misplaced and is rubbing against the plate which increases the valve noise. To eliminate this requires either the fitting of a new spring or the reshaping of the old spring so that contact with the cover plate is avoided.

Although rarely done, it is better to strain lubricating oil before it is put in the tank or reservoir, not only to prevent the clogging of oil ducts, and to eliminate the possibility of abrasive action due to foreign substances, but also to prevent foreign matter from getting into the pump. Such matter may cause the pump to stick and some part to become broken.

Leaky plugs can cause a lot of trouble that is very difficult to trace. They will make a motor miss at high speed or on heavy pulls, but will permit it to run quite properly at all times and purposes, under ordinary conditions. The principal trouble is caused by porous porcelain which allow the high tension current to ground without jumping the spark plug. The only remedy is to fit new plugs that are known to be in good condition and to be careful not to crack the porcelain in tightening them in the cylinders.

Despite the value of rosin applied to the brake bands to make them grip the drums more firmly, this substance never should be applied to cone clutch leathers to prevent slipping; its use will result in the formation of a sticky gummy deposit that will cause the clutch to grip and the car to start with a jerk instead of a gentle, steady movement. A little filter's earth generally does a great deal of good, if the slipping is due to too much oil on the engaging surfaces. If the filter's earth does not do it, it is time to make adjustments, if possible, or to fit a new leather face.

close and freely. Usually the large handle is adjustable either to the right or to the left and the small lever backward and forward. The proper point is where there is very little lost motion at any point of turning. After some trial, this type have become worn into a fixed position it is difficult to make closer adjustments without creating a noise. As soon as the teeth are brought closer together they are forced to ride on ridges. Of course this is only true of very old and badly worn gears.

Then again it often happens that two gears when purchased are not of the same pitch. In such a case one can hardly expect quiet running. With new gears of the same pitch and properly adjusted one should not have trouble.

Motorist Department Gazette—I would like to know the following: I find that my rear tires wear out very quickly because I throw out my clutch on hills and put on my brakes, which sometimes do not break evenly.

I have recently tried the following, and would like to know whether it will hurt my car or not.

When I come to a hill, I slow down as much as possible, leave in my clutch, raise my spark and gas should I get too much speed as I go down the hill, and put on my brakes. Always, however, leaving in my clutch.

If you will drop me a line about this you will greatly oblige me. I have a light six, bought last spring.

J. D. M. There is no particular harm in using the motor as a brake. Some drivers employ this method continually. It is not advisable, however, to have the motor run for long and then use the brakes to stop the momentum of the car. A great majority of drivers allow the motor to do the work upon the brakes for proper control. Two sets of brakes should be more than sufficient to do this. It should be an easy matter to effect an equal brake adjustment.

Motorist Department Gazette—The answers to the following questions will be greatly appreciated: A. Should the clutch be disengaged while rounding a corner? B. I recently purchased a new fan-belt which makes a squeaking noise when the engine is going at high speed. What is the cause of this? C. G. G. A. It is not necessary to disengage the clutch when turning corners. Where the transmission unit is separate from the power plant, the clutch should be disengaged when rounding a corner. B. The fan belt makes a squeaking noise when the engine is going at high speed. This is due to the fact that the fan belt is not properly adjusted. It should be adjusted so that it is tight enough to drive the fan, but not so tight that it will wear the pulleys.

Motorist Department Gazette—Will you please inform me as to what candle power bulbs are allowed in head lights in gray limits?

The large head lamps have about a 10 candlepower bulb. The smaller side lights have about a 4-candlepower bulb. In the large cities headlights are not permitted and the small lights must be dimmed. It is often necessary to shade these somewhat when the reflectors are very bright.

Makes Children's Store Feature In City's Business Life

A. Starr Best Sells Chicago $500,000 Worth of Children's Clothes a Year Through Newspaper Advertising.

Uses 3 Ads Weekly in One Newspaper for Six Years.

By Andrew L. Demling.

"Thirty-five years or so ago, children were a negligible quantity from the commercial standpoint.

"My father had a large family of growing youngsters at that time, and the problem of keeping them clothed appropriately, neatly and without any degree of individuality was a question of some magnitude—not from the standpoint of cost, but from the standpoint of the parents' desire to provide the wants of children, and had nothing to do with it.

This situation eventually led to my father's conceiving the idea of opening an establishment that should study the needs and requirements of children's outfitting, and should cater to them exclusively.

"We were living in New York, and the people took kindly to the idea from the start, so the outfitting of children became an established industry."

Sons Forced Out, Open Chicago Store.
This much we had just managed to make out above the chorus of typewritten and added remarks by which we were surrounded. For Mr. A. Starr Best, who sells the mothers of Chicago $500,000 worth of children's clothing a year, uses a plain, word laden desk, in the very midst of his office, the only concession to adornment being a large framed photograph of the president, to whom he bears a somewhat noticeable resemblance.

Best and voice eventually becoming attuned to the noise, we asked about the establishing of the Chicago store.

"When our father died," replied Mr. Best, "the partners forced his share out of the firm, so we turned our attention to the western field. We established this house fourteen years ago."

"The idea of a children's store was a welcome in Chicago as it had been in New York. Our first year's business in Chicago was $75,000, but our growth during the last few years was not in proportion, or rather, did not live up to the seeming promise of that first year."

"We were occupying one room with about 1,000 square feet at our command, and bade fair to continue running along in our original groove. Our customers were loyal and enthusiastic, so the result was a natural slow growth, from word of mouth advertising."

"Of course, we had done a certain amount of newspaper advertising from the beginning. But it was intermittent, scattering and not in any way distinctive."

"This was the situation until six years ago. Then a certain advertising man put me in a corner one day, and made me listen."

"Best," he said, "you have a proposition in the establishment that ought to be growing out of all proportion to its present state. There is a way to secure that growth, at a very slight larger expenditure than you are making now."

"I grant you that you are advertising, but you are not concentrating your effort. Until an appropriation has passed a certain state of magnitude to permit decided prominence in each field you invade, scattering your forces means weakening their effectiveness."

"Here is where you come in, Mr. Best. I want you to use a one column, say eight or ten inch space, three times every week in the ——— (naming the daily newspaper)."

"By using these ads different and distinctive, and by securing the same position as nearly every time as possible, and by keeping them up, keeping the fact everlastingly before Chicago that she has a children's store, and that there are advantages in buying here instead of other places, we will make this store a feature of Chicago, and a big feature."

Results Slow, Sticks to It.
"The upshot of it was that I consented to try out his plan, upon which he freely staked his advertising judgment."

"I set to work to make the series distinctive. We began naming little original styles, and making a feature of unusually attractive cuts of human looking youngsters. Including in real child pastimes, in clothes appropriate to the situation."

"But nothing happened. There were no mobs fighting to buy our dresses. I think we sold two dresses as a result of the first ad."

"Sometimes we sold more, of course, and sometimes none, until, at the end of the third month or so I opined that we had proved that there was very little to Mr. Advertising Man's idea, and that I was ready to call a halt."

longer.
"Before the end of the first year, the foundation laid, we were well into the erection of the success structure proper. Our styles, with their quaint names and quaint, attractive lines, achieved a wide popularity of a solid, steady character."

"At the end of our second year our quarters were too small, and we had to move into a larger and more centrally located building. Now we are using 15,000 square feet, or fifteen times the space we had previously found sufficient."

Same Plan Still Brings Growing Success.
"We are still using those three ads a week, though of course their size has increased, and at the same time, and are still getting constantly growing results."

"Our yearly business has grown to $500,000, and the rate of its yearly growth goes on uninterrupted."

"Even this year?""
"Yes, indeed, even this year. We are far ahead of our last year's schedule, and have had to do less in the way of increased advertising than we had expected."

"In fact, it has been our experience that the events and conditions of this year and last have been easily neutralized by that extra effort."

Receive Shipment of Russo-Austrian Made Toys.
"And here is a curious fact that may interest you: at Christmas our store Santa Claus gives away little artificial Christmas trees."

"These trees are made in Austria, but the leaves are formed of feathers that come from Russia."

"We placed our order for this year last February, with small hope of delivery into this month, last week."

Points Out "Morale" Stick to It.
"So the European situation hasn't affected us even in this minor instance."

"And the youngsters have come into their own, and their stores have come to stay?"

"Without a doubt," he replied, rising as we did, and piloting us in a winding course between the still strident machines to the office door.

"The making of our story, as every good story has its moral, is not only to advertise, but to stick to it. Impatience or discouragement are costly, yet long, others, besides ourselves have expected success, full grown and opulent, to follow hard on the heels of their advent into advertising endeavor."

"It is the same in any line of work: the building up of success means patient, unremitting, earnest and intense effort, in advertising more essentially than in any other department of the business."

"And the maintaining of one's standard of success, once won, means the faithful and unflinching continuance of that advertising effort, and increasing it as success comes."

"Our growth has come in the six years we have been constant newspaper advertisers. The fact that we were persuaded to stick to it, when results seemed slow in developing, brought about the final big result, the present state of the business."

CANAL COMMISSION IN BITTER ATTACK

American Members On Panama Zone Commission Experience Trouble With Native Commissioners.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Panama, Sept. 4.—Although the Joint Land Commission has suspended sitting because of the absence of one of the American commissioners, bitter attacks upon the American members of the commission and officials of the Panama canal appear almost daily in the Panama newspapers. Charges of unfairness and prejudice together with allegations of false testimony on the part of American land inspectors are made.

The recent troubles of the land commission were due to the inability of the two American Commissioners and the two American Commissioners to reach agreements on amounts to be given certain claimants. The attacks on American canal officials are directed chiefly against Frank Reule, a special attorney in charge of the claims, although governor Goethals also is receiving a share of the attack.

For some time it has been the policy of the Panamanian members of the commission to be as liberal as possible with the claimants while on the other hand the two American members have been inclined to closely examine all claims brought before the commission. In this they have been upheld by the American canal officials. It is frequently pointed out by Mr. Reule that the United States is already very liberal with claimants, but is decidedly opposed to paying twice for the same tract of land to which the claimants have a doubtful title.

The relations of the canal officials and the two American commissioners are also somewhat strained. A recent award in which the two commissioners agreed with the Panamanian members was resented by the canal officials and was incidentally brought down upon the American members' heads by the Secretary of State Lansing. This award, while in itself unimportant, sets a precedent upon which the price of lands in the immediate vicinity would be established. It would mean the payment of approximately $2,000,000 more for the land than its present market value.

Governor Goethals has asked Secretary of War Garrison to endeavor to have the Department of State arrange with Panama for some other means of settling land claims. He advocates the organization of a special claims court to sit in the Canal Zone from which claimants could appeal to a higher court in the United States. Diplomatic difficulties, however, confront this plan.

AN UNUSUAL VACATION.

Not long ago I wrote of a wife who went away for her vacation alone, leaving her husband at home to look after their three children. You will remember that it was his suggestion, made because he realized how tired and worn she was.

Now she is back. Not only rested and reinvigorated, but with a fresh viewpoint. She declares that she had become "stale" both as a wife and a mother, although she never realized it before she got away by herself.

Little things her children did bothered her beyond all reason. This was because she was a poor mother, but because she was such a good one, she was with her children or thinking about them continually. She was nearly too close to her subject. She needed to get away to get fresh perspective.

Of course she returned to them hungry for them. She had not been gone a day before she wanted to come home to them. But she did not give in, although they were never far from her mind. She thought of little tricks the children had, some cunning, and others not so cunning. She missed even the quiet, thinking of them lovingly and sympathetically, much more so than usual. In other words, she has had opportunity to stand aside and, while renewing her own reservoirs of vitality, get a fresh, unbiassed view of her children and her relations with them.

Her Husband Understands Now. Even more than all this is the sympathy and understanding that her husband now has for her problems. For two weeks he had all the care of the children. He took their mother's place during that time and assumed, as best he could, her relationship to them. He knows from experience just what her daily routine is and how much she has to bear with.

Nevertheless, he enjoyed his vacation. He never had a chance to become really and truly intimate with them, in the way a mother always is.

The two weeks spent in the beach, walks in the woods, car rides and picnics comprised one of the most enjoyable vacations he ever spent. It was a change for him to be with the children, just as it was a change for the mother to be away from them.

It was, of course, an unusual way to spend a vacation. And not the least unusual phase of it was the benefit that all concerned derived from it!

ALL GERMAN SCHOOLS EXCEPT FORESTRY COLLEGES KEPT OPEN DURING WAR

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE] Berlin, Sept. 4. — Except for four forestry schools, all the German institutions of higher education have kept open throughout the war, though, of course, with diminished attendance.

In the summer term of 1914, there were at the twenty-two German universities, eleven technical academies, five commercial colleges, three veterinary schools, and six agricultural and mining schools, 70,000 students. A number, which in the autumn of 1914 had sunk to 64,700. Of this number 50,900 were registered as "under arms."

In the present summer term, there are only 2200 students attending lectures at Berlin University, as compared with 8000 last year. This number includes women students.

The percentage of German university students who have gone to the front is largest at Königsberg—84 per cent; while it is 60 per cent at Heidelberg; 56 per cent at Munich; 54 per cent at Berlin and only 11 per cent at Frankfurt.

The total number of German students and professors killed in the war, according to the Academic Rundschau, is 1200. Leipzig University has suffered most severely of all, losing 266 students.

BIENNIAL CONVENTION OF LUTHERAN CHURCH WILL BE HELD SEPT. 9 TO 15TH

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 4. — Announcement is made here of plans for the biennial convention of the General Council of the Lutheran church in America, which will be held September 9-15, with sessions in Rock Island and Moline, Ill., and Davenport, Ia.

This body of Lutherans is composed of thirteen district synods with a combined membership of half a million communicants.

The women's federation of the General Council of the Lutheran church in America will hold its convention at the same places at the same time. Both bodies will consider various problems that confront the evangelists in America, and among other things, it is announced, arrangements will be considered for holding a series of notable services in 1917 to commemorate the 400th anniversary of the great Reformation which gave the world Protestantism.

Household Hint

GREEN TOMATO MINCEMEAT.—Take one pound of green tomatoes, wash, cut off the ends, and cover with boiling water. Let stand one hour, then drain. When well drained add two quarts chopped apples, one cup chopped suet, two pounds brown sugar, two teaspoons cinnamon, two of cloves, one grated nutmeg, one teaspoon salt, two-thirds teaspoon pepper. Mix all together and cook half an hour. Can be used and add one large cup vinegar. Can and seal while hot.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.—To Remove Stains From Silk Garments.—Use five parts glycerin mixed with five parts water and one-quarter part ammonia. Try a small piece first, and if it takes the color out, don't use ammonia.

Cleaning Copper or Brass.—Cut a lemon in half, dip in salt and rub over surface of metal, which must be speedily washed off with water to prevent the acid eating into it.

TO KEEP ICE CREAM.—When you create and spread and some left over pack in a Mason jar, put on a rubber ring and screw the top of the jar on as tight as is possible. Drop the jar into the bucket of salt and ice, in which the ice cream was originally. When wanted the cream will be quite as firm as it was when first opened.

THE TABLE.—Mushroom Bouillon.—To a quart of mushrooms take one quart milk (or half milk and water), two tablespoons butter, pepper and salt to taste. Thoroughly wash fresh mushrooms, peel carefully, then cut in small pieces. Melt butter, put in mushrooms, add milk and season. Simmer on back of stove about an hour, then boil ten minutes.

Wafers With Cheese.—These are very nice to serve with the mushroom bouillon. Mix about two tablespoons catsup, one teaspoon mustard (German is the best) with one-fourth pound York state cheese, grated. Mix and spread on wafers. Lay in pan and heat in oven just a minute or two until crisp. This can be made and put in a jar; will keep some time, and ready for emergency.

Beef and Mutton Pie.—Take tender meat, pound it out thin and broil it ten minutes, then cut off the heavy and gristly parts. Season it highly with salt and pepper, butter it and cut it into small pieces. Line a pudding dish with pastry, put in the meat and to each tablespoon add a spoonful of tomato catsup with a tablespoonful of water. Sprinkle over flour, cover it with pie crust and ornament as you please with pastry. Cook in hot water and mutton make a good pie by cutting into bits and season highly with salt and pepper. Put into a pie dish, turn a little melted butter over, or gravy, and pour in water till you can just see it at the top.

Pineapple Tapioca Pudding.—Three cups water, one-half cup sugar, three-fourths cup cornstarch, one cup pineapple (or any fresh or preserved fruit you have in house), one-half cup tapioca. This pudding can be made for six people at a cost of from twelve to fifteen cents.

Fruit Puffs.—Sift together, one pint flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt. Then stir in enough sweet milk to make a batter. Turn into cups until half the batter is used. Then place on it a layer of fruit and cover with remainder of batter. Bake in steamer for twenty minutes. Serve with sugar and cream.

Prince of Wales Cake.—Dark part: One cup brown sugar, one egg, one cup butter (cream together), yolks of three eggs, one-half cup sour milk, one tablespoon New Orleans molasses, one teaspoon cloves, a little nutmeg, one teaspoon soda. Light part: With two cups flour, one cup chopped raisins.

Beet Salad.—Boil medium-sized beets until well done. Peel and let them cool, then cut into centers, salt them slightly and fill with peas. Line a dish with crisp lettuce leaves and place the beets in a ring of cold-boiled sliced potatoes. Serve with French dressing.

Heart and Home Problems

cuts a five spot. A being entitled to first prize, and B being entitled to second prize or forfeit? Does C, whose score is second highest, come in for second prize instead of B?

MRS. D. W. T. B gets the second prize, because she deserves it more than C.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Is lemon juice perfectly safe as a bleach for the face and neck?

(2) Is much cream harmful? (3) Can round shoulders be straightened by the use of shoulder braces?

(4) I have parted my hair in the middle, and it seems I cannot comb it any other way without laying perfectly flat. Can you tell me any way of dressing it that it will stay fluffy? It is also very thin in the front, but seems thick in the back.

(5) Lemon juice is very drying to the skin. Cucumbers are better adapted for bleaching. It is made by mixing two ounces of ammonia and half an ounce of white wax and spermaceti with an ounce of cucumber juice. The latter is made by washing a cucumber and cutting it into small bits, peel and all, and put in a jar with water. Let it stand for a few days, then strain the juice out and use it.

(6) The cucumber placed on the face where it will heat slowly and simmer gently until the mass is pulpy. It is strained through a cloth, and when the cucumber is added, the cream is stirred. The almond oil should be poured in as soon as the fats are soft and the cream removed.

(7) Not if it is a good cream. (8) They help to remind one that he is stooping.

(9) Pump your hair for a while, even if it is not very comely. If you massage your scalp every night it will help the growth of your hair and will make the part less annoying.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

(By Chas. G. Perival, M. D.) (Inquiries on health subjects may be directed to Dr. Perival of this paper, and will be answered in this column. He will not give medical advice.)

Grape Juice as a Beverage.—It is a deplorable fact that the average individual always believes that the more expensive an article the more valuable it becomes. In the matter of food and drink the opposite condition really prevails in many cases. Take the various drinks, for instance: pure water is unquestionably the best drink under nearly all circumstances. Next to this, however, in value for drinking purposes, are the various unfermented fruit juices. These could be supplied very cheaply, but usually they are extremely difficult to secure.

The easiest and cheapest fruit juice to manufacture, and one will ordinarily have to go to considerable trouble in order to secure this healthful drink, and it is not easy to ask for it where convenient drinks are served, the tone and manner of those in charge will quickly indicate that they consider it a "cheap" drink, and do not keep it.

It is a cheap drink, but it does not prevent it being the best. Unfermented apple juice is one of the most beneficial drinks. In many cases it has been known to remedy very serious troubles. It is also a good tonic, arousing a torpid liver to activity, and if one's stomach does not furnish a sufficient supply of acids to properly digest food, it is of special advantage. It is well, however, to remember that what is sold for older on the market at the present time is usually a mixture of water and acids. These drinks are of course deleterious in their influence.

Be sure that you secure good quality grape juice. It is especially valuable and is really as much of a food as a drink when pure and properly sold. It is not a mere tonic. The nourishing qualities it contains are almost equal to milk. It is especially valuable to weak stomachs and for invalids, but anyone can be benefited by using grape juice when fruit juice of some kind is needed. It would be well to note, however, that one cannot drink grape juice as freely as water even though our friend Wm. J. Bryan did much to bring it before the public.

Food Value of Vegetables.—Tomatoes contain iron and assist to cleanse the liver. Lettuce has a soothing, quieting effect upon the nerves and is a remedy for insomnia. Celery is an acknowledged nerve tonic. Onions are also a tonic for the nerves. Potatoes should be chewed by those who "have a horror for getting fat." Spinach has medicinal properties equal to the most indigo of all blue pills ever known. Parsnips, as is conceded by scientists, possess almost the virtues claimed for sarsaparilla. Asparagus is efficacious in kidney ailments. Cucumbers contain an acid that is helpful in some cases of dyspepsia, but beware of them if you are fat. Cabbage in Holland is regarded as something of a blood purifier. Parsley will assist good digestion, like cheese and nuts. Pumpkins are an ingredient in a certain patent medicine that is guaranteed to cure quite a variety of the ailments that flesh is heir to, but the world is increasing in inhabitants who do not believe in them. Rheumatism, leucorrhea, sour oranges and all other tart fruits are especially beneficial to those suffering from rheumatic troubles. Onions, celery and turnips relieve nervous disorders, onions being accounted the best nerve tonic known. Digestion is promoted by the use of onions, tomatoes, olives, garlic and peanuts. Elderberries are considered beneficial to those suffering from dropsy. Spinach, onions, relieve gravel. Carrots are good for asthmatic patients. Turnips, onions and salt relieve scurvy. And there is scarcely anything better than lemons to break up a cold to relieve feverish thirst, biliousness, low fevers, liver troubles and rheumatism.

H. R. P. Will you kindly tell me the cause of grease constantly working its way out of the nose and forehead and temples?

Answer: Cause is super-active condition of Sebaceous glands. Would ask if you are a blond or brunette as Nature has provided brunettes with glands that secrete more sweat, and sweat is not as fresh as the blonde's. A further example by the brunette having thicker and more abundant hair. Treatment

Helpful Health Hints

May we never worry without cause and never have cause to worry.

Many a man who believes in long walks could be converted by the gift of an automobile.

The energy we use in trying to get something for nothing could better be used in getting something for something.

A resolve to obtain health without a concentrated effort toward that end is worse than useless, for if not carried out as part of your daily life, it has a reaction instead of an action as its ultimate outcome.

Osteopathy maintains that the energizing source of health is within the body, not without; that health is the normal condition, disease the abnormal; that bodily disorders are the result of chemical or mechanical obstruction to nerve vibrations and blood flow; that a diseased body needs proper feeding, along with anatomical adjustment to release and free the life forces, thus bringing about the co-operation of Nature to effect the cure. If you would live free from ill-health, you must learn more about your physical functions. It is a pleasure for the Osteopath to instruct you.

It would be to endeavor to carry off the surplus waste material through the channels. The most logical way would be by diet, internal bathing and more perfect elimination of the entire body. Some form of exercise that will stimulate the liver is necessary and valuable.

Mrs. D. Please give me advice on how to feed my year and six months old baby. Should he have anything besides milk?

Answer: Half the second year babies need four regular meals daily with trained cereal jellies, one-third jelly and two-thirds milk, with first and last meals; three ounces of beef juice, or six ounces of soup for noon meal; either zwieback, buttered toast, Graham crackers, or hard biscuit with all meals and dessert of prune pulp or apple sauce. Last half of second year, babies can digest fresh vegetables and rare, scraped beef, steak or chops, in addition. Second and third year they need cereals and cream, butter, thicker soups, sugar, more vegetables, larger amounts and quart of milk. No chops, steak or roasts, meat much before sixteen months. No vegetables much before two years; peas, string beans, spinach, carrots, asparagus tips cooked soft, and coarsened, baked potato. Soup stocks should be of chicken, beef or mutton. Cereals mean corn meal, rice, barley, hominy, farina, etc.; oatmeal is too heating in summer. Prolonged cooking breaks up cellulose of cereals into digestible bits. All fruit juices should be strained, all cooked fruit pulped. Up to six years children cannot incorporate too much cereal for their good. Between noon meal and supper dry bread layered with butter and sugar. Regular food and fresh air are Nature's appetizers. Don't allow children to go to bed with cold feet; see that their feet and legs are warm and dry. This will make them comfortable and ensure rest and also prevent suffering and serious illness.

SUBMARINE COMMANDERS, GERMAN'S WAR HEROES, NAME THE BABY AFTER THEM [SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE] Berlin, Sept. 4.—Next to naming a new baby or a statue or a bridge or tower after Hindenburg, granting the freedom of a city to the commander of a successful submarine is Germany's popular diversion at present. No less than four naval commanders have thus been honored and have been made "honorary citizens" of communities large and small. The first one to be thus recognized was Frigate Captain von Mueller, commander of the sea raider Emden. The city of Emden, after the ship's destruction, named von Mueller its honor citizen, while his birthplace, Blankenburg, paid him similar tributes.

The city of Karlsruhe took the same steps in the case of Frigate Captain Erich Koehler, commander of the Karlsruhe, and Otto Weddigen, captain lieutenant of the U-2 and U-25, who perished with the latter submarine, has been similarly honored by his birthplace, Herford. The latest case is that of the city of Kronach, which has conferred its freedom on Captain Lieutenant Hering, commander of the U-21 and the U-51.

CHAPTER XXVI.

One Way of Escape.

He was propped up against the wall, not far from us, and I bent over, noting how he was bound. Instantly I cut the cords and began rubbing the man's wrists to restore circulation.

"I never noticed you were strung up like that, Nichols," I said earnestly. "Who did the job?"

"The sergeant," he answered, choking. "I tried to speak as soon as I saw you an' the lady yere, but I couldn't get the gag out er my mouth. Bend down a bit lower; I don't want none o' them soldiers ter hear."

"All right—what is it?"

"Yer ol' Jedge Wyatt's boy, ain't yer?"

"Yes."

"An' she's the darter o' Major Harwood?"

"This is Noreen Harwood."

"I thought so, but that ain't hardly right 'nough fer me ter be sure. I married yer over cross ther mountains—an' is Anse Cowan along with them Yanks out ther?"

"Yes, and all the gang, excepting old Ned, who was shot last night."

"You shot him?"

"Well, it was my pistol; we were fighting together. Suddenly a thought swept through my mind. 'See here, Nichols, you are in as bad shape as we are. Anse has treated you like a dog, and he will never forgive you for that marriage, even if it was performed to save your life—'

"It wasn't," he chuckled. "I wasn't afeerd yer would shoot. I was that mad at Anse I didn't care; but I reckon he'll 'bout skin me alive if ever he catches me yere."

"Do you know of any way out?"

He glanced about cautiously, to assure himself that no soldier was within earshot.

"The baptistry under the pulpit; this is a Baptist church, and there is an opening in the floor just back of where you are. Peel a little to the left—yes, about that—don't you touch an iron ring? What? Well, there's one thar, an' it lifts two puncheon slabs spiked together."

"Yes, but what is below—just a tank?"

His voice trembled with eager excitement, and he gripped me tightly.

"I ain't afeerd ter tell you, 'cause I knew both yer daddies, an' I reckon yer'll take me 'long with yer, won't you? Yer won't leave me yere fer ter face that Anse Cowan? Yer'll promise me that?"

"Of course, Nichols," I said soothingly, the man's cowardice almost disgusting. "If you show us a way of escape we'll go together if the chance comes—what is it? Speak quick!"

"I—I know the ol' trail over the mountains down ter Covington; I reckon as how you couldn't never git thar without me. I—I thought it all out while I was lyin' yere trussed up like a turkey, but they never git me no chance fer ter get loose. Now if you folks will cut this yere rope often my legs I'll show yer how fer ter git out—an' nobody'll never know nuthin' 'bout it."

"Explain first," I said shortly. "As far as trust goes, I have confidence in you, Nichols, just so far as I can see you. What is below?"

"Five steps leadin' down into a wood tank," he explained slowly, realizing that his only hope of release lay in a full description. "It's empty now, an' dry as a board; ain't been a baptism yere in six months. The place whar the water runs out is at the south side, right down 'gainst the bottom; ther cover ter the opening is screwed tight by a wheel. Ol' Ned Cowan made ther contraption, an' yer kin stand on ther upper step an' open an' shut ther thing, an' never git yer feet wet."

"And how big is the opening?"

"Wal, I don't jist know, but I've crawled through thar fixin' a leak, an' if I did it once, I reckon I kin again. Taint mor'n 'bout six feet beyond ther wall till it hits the edge o' ther ravine. Ther's why the Yanks didn't make no attack on that side o' ther church—thar ain't no room."

The whole situation lay clear before me. I had no thought of utilizing this unexpected opportunity myself, for I meant to stay with the others, and perform my part of the fighting to the end. But here was protection, and possible escape, for Noreen. Yet could the preacher be trusted? Would he play fair if I released him, and left them alone together? Did not his interests also lie in getting away safely? What act of treachery could he commit, and, besides the girl was armed.

"How do you light this church?"

"Candles mostly," surprised at the question, "yer ain't goin' fer ter light up, are you?"

"Not here—no; but below, where is there one?"

"I reckon on that thar shelf in the pulpit yer'll find a dozen or so."

"Bring a couple here, Noreen."

She slipped across silently, and came back with two in her hand.

"You are going to try to get away?" she whispered cautiously.

"No, not now. An opportunity may come later. If it was possible to slip."

"All these men out I would gladly do so—but it is already too late for any such attempt. But there is a chance for you, and it is even barely possible that, when all hope of defense is over, I may find some way of joining you."

"You—you promise that?" she asked.

"If I consent to go, you—you will come later if you can?"

"Yes, I will pledge myself to accept every chance, when I can do no more fighting. I'll come to you, if I live. Now, Nichols, listen—I am going to set you free, and permit you to slip down through that trap door with this lady. She is armed, and she knows how to shoot. Attempt one treacherous trick and you pay the penalty."

"I ain't that kind," he whined.

"Oh, yes you are; but it will never pay this time. Don't take your eyes off him, Noreen; the moment that trap door closes light the candle, and keep the revolver ready. Make him unscrew the cap, and leave it off out of the way. Set the candle down in one corner as far back as possible. You better get out first."

"I—I am not to wait for you?" he bewildered.

"Not in there—no; outside, for they might fire the building. Nichols, where is the best place for the two of you to hide so I could find you?"

"In the woods to the west; there is a trail half way down the ravine a climb'n' up—an' ol' hog trail."

My fingers touched his throat, and I bent lower staring straight into his eyes.

"Now, mark well what I say, Nichols. I am going to release you, and give you a chance to get away. But you stay with the woman—do you hear! Stay with her until you both reach the Confederate lines at Covington. If I ever get out of here alive, and learn you have attempted any trick, I'll run you down, Nichols, if it takes ten years. Now I'll cut the rope, and you creep over to where that ring is in the floor, and wait my order."

Evidently his limbs were numb from the tight cord, for he crept the few feet painfully, and then sat up rubbing the afflicted parts with both hands. I swept one glance out through the window, and then about the dim interior, endeavoring to locate the men nearest us. Only one stood close enough to observe our movements, and I sent him with a message to the sergeant.

"Now, Noreen," I whispered swiftly, "this is the best time. Take these papers; they are for Jackson; give them to the first Confederate officer you meet, and have them forwarded at once. Don't trust Nichols for a single moment out of range of your revolver."

"You will not come?"

"Not now; you would not wish me to desert my comrades—would you?"

"Oh, I do not know! I do not know. It is so hard to decide. You really wish me to go? It will please you?"

"Yes."

"And you will come if—if you can? I am to wait, and—hope for you?"

"I pledge you my word, dear girl."

She clung to my hands, her face uplifted in the moonlight.

"I—I am your wife," she said softly, and I—I want you to—"

Three shots rang out clear and distinct without, and a voice shouted hoarsely.

"Stand to it, lads!" cried Harwood from the dark vestibule. "The Yanks are coming!"

I swung her light form across the platform to where Nichols crouched.

"Quick now, both of you! Careful! don't fall, Noreen! Go on, man; I'll close the trap—and God help you if you don't remember!"

CHAPTER XXVII.

The End of Defense.

I had no time for thought—action called me. Yet her last unfinished sentence rang in my memory. Could it be that she cared also? That out of this strange association there had grown an awakening interest? For a single moment I stood there motionless, my feet on the lowered trap, dimly conscious of the uproar about me, yet scarcely able to realize the imminence of the peril. They were pouring volleys into the front door—the roaring of discharge ending in the sound of splintered wood, and sharp cries of pain. Carbines cracked in response, and Harwood's voice sounded continually through the hideous discord.

"Get back, men! Get back! Ay, beyond the partition, you fellows in front there! No, don't leave the windows; they'll charge presently, and there is no use firing those carbines now—the range is too long. Load again—load! and stand ready. Wyatt!"

"Here, sir."

"Any work for you there?"

"No; only a half dozen Yanks in sight from this end."

"Bring all but two men, and come here! Wharton, stand ready to take a hand. Ah! there the blue-bellies come, lads—now give them the lead! Fire! damn you—fire!"

The little squad of us leaped down the aisle, and Wharton's men clambered over the benches, cursing and yelling. Already the smoke of the carbines filled the church, and we could see little except in the flash of the gunfire. The swirl of bodies hurled me to the right, away from where Harwood stood, and brought me in front of the opposite door. Through this opening and the narrow window beyond, I got a glimpse outside—at a black mass of men sweeping straight toward us, their guns gleaming viciously, their voices echoing in savage shout. It was a mere glimpse, an infernal vision, and almost at the same instant they came crashing against the shattered door, beating it down with their gun-stocks, and leaping through into the maze of overturned benches littering the vestibule. The door fell in splinters. How they got through that tangle of death I know not. Into their very faces we poured our fire—our own men, caught within the narrow space, striking at them with clubbed guns—but they were too many to be held. Over the dead poured the torrent of living, firing, cursing, striking, jamming the few gray-jackets against the inner wall, and, in two resistless streams, hurling themselves against both vestibule doors.

Wedged in the portals, I saw all this so clearly that each detail stands out in memory—the infuriated faces, the falling bodies, the disfiguring blood-stains, the savage glint of steel. Those who came first were not soldiers—they were Cowan's men, gaunt, rough fellows, bearded and dirty, their fierce curses sounding above the uproar. And they fought like fiends, driven by Cowan's voice, and pressed remorselessly forward by the cavalrymen behind. I saw him once, a blood spot on his cheek, and I fired over the heads of those between us, but though he fell, he came to his feet again and was swept to one side by the rush of men. I saw all this, and no more; it was like a flash on the screen—and then everything became an indistinct blur.

They were upon us, jammed in the narrow doorways, each man fighting for life. I used gun and revolver. In the red mist before me were black shapes, hateful faces. Twice I lost foot and fell, but was up again, fronting them. I stepped on dead bodies, slipped in pools of blood; falling men caused me to stagger; a slug of lead tore burning through my shoulder; a glancing knife blade ripped my forearm. I had no time, no room, in which to reload; my hands gripped the hot carbine barrel, and I swung the stock like a flail.

Inch by inch they won through the door; we could kill, but not stop them, and they hurled us back, stumbling over the dead, clambering across overturned benches, but unable to stem the increasing tide. We were all together now—Harwood, Wharton—the sole handful left, and we made a fight of it, the best we could. There was a moment's pause, the merest instant in which to breathe, and my eyes met Harwood's. He was naked to the waist, hatless, blood dripping from a cut over one eye, the stock of his carbine shattered.

"Ah, gunner of Staunton," he called out cheerily, although his voice cracked with dryness. "Didn't I tell you if you wanted a good time to fine the cavalry?"

"Forward, men, forward!" It was Fox's voice, although I saw nothing of him. "Once more, and it's over with—forward!"

"Now, lads, meet them!" burst out Harwood. "About me, Third Kentucky—here they come!"

They drove us in so as to encircle us, yet the jumble of benches served as some protection to our rear. Perhaps the fact that there were Yankees between us and the pulpit prevented firing for we met hand to hand in a death grapple. I have seen battles, yet nothing like that; it was as though beasts of the jungle fought; men struggled with naked hands, struck death blows, fired into each other's faces, trampled over writhing bodies, cursing, or yelling defiance as they fell. We scarcely knew friend from foe, blue from gray. I cannot even tell what occurred to myself in those breathless moments. I know I fought madly, blindly—again and again sweeping a space clear with my weapon; hands gripped my throat, my hair, and I tore loose; fingers clutched at my legs, but I kicked free. I was conscious of blows, of wounds; I knew when Harwood fell, and was trampled under foot; I heard others scream; I saw the hated face of Anse Cowan in the ruck and leaped for him, but whom my mad blow struck I could not tell. Some rush, some quick pressure of bodies, hurled me sideways, caught me in a vise; I tripped over a dead man, staggered to my feet again. I got footing on the pulpit platform, and held it for an instant, my gun-barrel crashing into the mass of faces below. Wharton joined me, a bull mad with rage; I saw him rend the pulpit stand from the floor and hurl it with all his strength into the ruck. Then twenty hands gripped him, hauling him down, a clubbed musket descended, and the sergeant pitched forward like a log of wood. There was a shot, the blow of a rifle barrel, and I went down, the very breath of life seemingly knocked out of me.

Dinner Stories

A Mississippi river steamer was stopped in the mouth of a tributary stream owing to a fog. A lady passenger inquired of the captain the cause of the delay.

"Can't see up the river," was the laconic response.

"But I can see the stars overhead," said the lady.

"Yes, ma'am," continued the captain, "but until the boilers bust we ain't going that way."

"Why do they call those men cow-boys, mother?" asked little Robert as they came out of the movie place.

"Because they take care of the cattle," replied his mother.

"What cattle?"

"Why, dirty cattle on the big ranches out west where these men live. There are thousands of cattle grazing on the plains, and the cowboys are employed to look after them and see that they do not stray too far from home."

"But how do they get time to watch the cattle, mother?" asked Robert.

"Why, Robert, you ask such funny questions," said his mother. "The cowboys haven't anything else to do but look after the cattle."

"They do too have something else to do," contradicted the boy. "Every time I see them, they're busy shooting Indians and Mexicans."

"Here's a scientist," said hubby, looking up from his paper. "who says it is only the female mosquitoes who sting."

"That's just like you men," exclaimed wife. "Always blaming things on us poor women."

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, Sept. 4, 1875.—The masons are making lively work on the foundation of Mrs. Beals' block. It will go up with a rush when the brick is started.

It will require about 30,000 shingles to cover the roof of the Congregational church. The shingling is being done by a large force of men and it will be completed in a few days.

Easily Discouraged?

"Impatience or discouragement are costly," says A. Starr Best, who has developed a $500,000 yearly business as a children's outfitter, in Chicago.

He tells on another page of this paper, how he was persuaded by an advertising man, six years ago, to run an ad three times a week in a daily paper, to stimulate his slowly growing business.

He tells how results were so slow for the first few months that he wanted to abandon the campaign, but was assured that he was laying a solid foundation for future success.

At the end of the first year, success had arrived, and at the end of the second, he was forced to move into quarters 15 times the size of his original ones.
